

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. I travel from time to time, work two jobs, and go to graduate school. In short, I am an extremely busy person and I do not want to be called at home to be solicited for some product or service.

Before I signed up for Indiana's Telephone Privacy Do Not call list, I came home after a weekend away and had to clear 18 messages off my answering machine from telephone solicitors. EIGHTEEN calls in about two days! It was that experience that motivated me to sign up for Indiana's do not call list. Since I signed up for the service, I only get about one call a week. Imagine that! Peace and quiet in my own home! I love it!

If there is a product or service I want, I know how to find who to contact. I HATE being harrassed in my own home from people trying to sell me things. And since I got ripped off once, I make it a policy to never purchase anything from someone who calls me on the telephone anyway. So businesses who want to call me will be wasting their time, and I don't want them wasting mine by calling me in the first place.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.
